

YOU CAN BE SAVED TODAY

“Come home asap; father just passed”

The phone fell from my hand! It was my elder brother. The finality in his voice was unmistakable and I knew it was true. The time was 3:25 am. The room was in semi-darkness. I wanted to scream but for some reason, I couldn't. Rey, my wife was fast asleep. The gentle rise and fall of her chest confirmed that.

I felt hot and cold all at once. Sleep deserted me and for the rest of the night, I sobbed intermittently as a constant, free-flowing memory of father became my companion. My father? Died?

Home at his bedside, hands shaking, I gently lifted the sheet off his face. There he was: still and peaceful. The truth that I had chosen not to accept staring back at me. As a Critical Medical caregiver, I recognized that stillness.

I took his hand in mine, it was cold, very cold. I shook his body, it felt so rigid like a log of wood! It was true, Father was gone! A huge lump grew in my throat, my feet felt like rubber as I collapsed over his remains and wept bitterly.

Out on the patio, hours later, reclining on a chair with my eyes closed, I reflected on my father's sudden passing. It dawned on me that it could have been me. After all, father only turned 64 last spring and he was never sickly. But am I ready if it comes? My heart was now racing. Death had always intrigued me, but today, it was different, I was gripped with fear. It had never felt like this before. Father had always told me “Jason, whatever you do, make sure that you make peace with your creator because there is no peace in heaven for those who made no peace with their creator on earth”

@reallygreatsite

INFO@VIEWPOINTMINISTRIESINTERNATIONAL.ORG

+1-301-683-8930

YOU CAN BE SAVED TODAY

"And as it is appointed for men to die once, but after this the judgment" I opened my eyes and sat up. That preacher on TV had said exactly that the night before. Then, it had angered me, and I had shouted profanities as I stormed out of the living room. But now, it struck a different chord. It was chilling and arresting.

"I had always known that I needed Jesus. Even with all my boast and bravado, I knew that the last thing I wanted to do was face a Godless eternity. I went on my knees. "Lord Jesus" I began in tears. It was strange to me that I was crying. "If all that I have heard about you is true, please save me, I don't want to die in this state..."

Dear friend, It is wisdom to heed God's call while you can: while you are still living. He says "...behold, now is the accepted time; behold, now is the day of salvation" (2Corinthians 6:2).

You can be wise and receive His gift of salvation today. Death is certain and untimed "...it is appointed for men to die once but after this, the judgment" (Hebrews 9:27). But you can be saved today and escape that judgment reserved for the unrepentant sinners. "...if you confess with your mouth the Lord Jesus and believe in your heart that God has raised Him from the dead, you will be saved" (Romans 10:9).

We invite you to come to Jesus today, a new beginning awaits you.

We would like to help you grow in your faith in the Lord Jesus Christ if you have decided to make Him the Lord of your life.

For further help towards your Christian growth and maturity, write to us at...
info@viewpointministriesinternational.org

"...CONTEND EARNESTLY FOR THE FAITH..." (JUDE 1:3)

VIEWPOINT MINISTRIES